During the construction, Olivier was eventually asked to take on all project management responsibilities for the owner. A building team was put together under his guidance, consisting of small specialist companies from Enkhuizen. The sea trials were successfully completed in recent weeks, and luxury yacht Neorion is now en route to Svalbard for her maiden voyage.

The office of Olivier van Meer is increasingly responsible for the overall supervision of construction projects. Cooperation with independent, purposely selected and highly specialised companies results in an efficient, economical and well-organised process with short communication lines.

Olivier van Meer is currently preparing the comprehensive renovation of a 125-foot classic schooner, including a completely new interior design. The final touches are being put to the specifications and technical drawings. The project will be implemented directly for the owner under the guidance of Olivier van Meer.

The office is currently also working on the design of a 95-metre square rigger for training, and the construction of several Puffin® yachts.
